

Author of the Week: Alice Walker

Alice Walker, in full Alice Malsenior Walker was born on February 9, 1944, Eatonton, Georgia, U.S. She was an American writer, short story writer, poet, and social activist whose novels, short stories, and poems are noted for their insightful treatment of African American culture. Her novels, most notably The Color Purple (1982), focus particularly on women. Alice Malsenior Walker was born in Eatonton, Georgia. Walker's first book of poetry, Once, appeared in 1968, and her first novel, The Third Life of Grange Copeland (1970), a narrative that spans 60 years and three generations, followed two years later. A second volume of poetry, Revolutionary Petunias and Other Poems, and her first collection of short stories, In Love and Trouble: Stories of Black Women, both appeared in 1973. After moving to New York, Walker completed Meridian (1976), a novel describing the coming of age of several civil rights workers in the 1960s.
